

HIRING PICKS UP YARDAGE IN AUGUST

OUTLOOK

August marked a meaningful rebound for the labor market, with hiring activity recovering from the softer pace seen earlier in the summer. The latest data suggests employers are continuing to add talent, reflecting steady business demand and renewed confidence in key areas of the economy.

While the overall hiring picture improved, growth was not evenly distributed across all industries. Some sectors expanded more aggressively than others, reinforcing a labor market that remains selective rather than broadly accelerated. Employers continue to focus their hiring efforts on roles that directly support operations, customer demand, and long-term business priorities.

For recruiters and talent leaders, the report points to a market where opportunities exist but competition for the right talent remains strong. Job seekers with in-demand skills and employers with targeted hiring strategies are likely to be best positioned as the labor market continues its steady advance.

SOURCES:

Federal Reserve Beige Book
Bureau of Labor Statistics Employment Situation
Reuters
CNBC
The New York Times

U.S. JOBS
REPORT RECAP
SEPTEMBER 2026